Voter's Lack of Enthusiasm Will Present Major Challenges to Both Sides

- Voters were asked on a scale of one to ten how excited they were to cast a ballot in this year's November election. At 5.7, voters are showing little enthusiasm at this point in casting a ballot. By comparison, voter enthusiasm in August 2012 for the last presidential election was 7.6, and in May 2014 voter enthusiasm for a gubernatorial election was a 6.3.
- The chart below compares enthusiasm to vote by party affiliation for August 2012 compared to May 2016.

Party	2012	2016
Strong Dem	8.2	6.5
Lean Dem	7.0	5.8
Independent	6.7	4.5
Lean GOP	7.8	6.0
Strong GOP	8.2	5.8

At 5.8, Republicans in particular face difficult challenge in motivating their base voters. Independent voters come in at 4.5 raising the specter of low Independent voter turnout making the 2016 election a battle of both sides to turn out their base voters.

- The most highly motivated voters at 7.3 are City of Detroit voters and at 6.9 African American voters. Caucasian voters come in at 5.6.

Trump vs. Clinton: Voters Split on Who They 'Think' Will Win

- Voters were asked regardless of who they plan to vote for, who did they think would actually win. Voters are split with 42% of voters believing Donald Trump will win while 41% of voters believe Hillary Clinton will win.

- Voters were read descriptions of current plans in the State Senate and the State House to help the Detroit Public Schools deal with its debt problem.
 - 30.7% of voters support the Senate Plan.
 - 18.5% of voters support the House Plan.
 - 39.2% of voters do not support either plan.
- Viewed in another way, 49.2% of voter support either the Senate or House plan while 39.2% of voters do not support either Legislative Plan.
- 52.9% of West Michigan voters do not support either Legislative Plan. Regionally, the House Plan leads the Senate Plan only in West Michigan.
- Strong Republican voters are split with 21.1% supporting the House Plan, 20.3% supporting the Senate Plan, and 48.1% of strong Republican voters not supporting either legislative plan.

Voters Narrowly Support Detroit Education Commission

- By a margin of 42.7%-37.8%, Michigan voters narrowly support the creation of the Detroit Education Commission that would control how many new or charter schools could open in the City of Detroit.
 - The DEC has the support of all party affiliations except Strong Republican voters who oppose it by a margin of 32.3%-47.4%.

Party	Support	Oppose
Strong Dem	47.9%	31.8%
Lean Dem	46.0%	34.0%
Independent	41.3%	39.2%
Lean GOP	50.8%	36.1%
Strong GOP	32.3%	47.4%

- Detroit voters oppose the creation of the DEC by a margin of 41.0%-48.7%.

17. The State Legislature has been considering plans to help Michigan's largest school system, the Detroit Public Schools, deal with its debt problem. Governor Rick Snyder, Detroit Mayor Mike Duggan and the Michigan Senate support a plan that would pay off $467 million in debt for the Detroit Public Schools. In addition, the Detroit Public Schools would receive an additional $200 million in transition costs to repair existing schools and invest in improved education programs. They argue that without this additional funding, the Detroit Public Schools will simply start off in debt again as they grapple with these existing needs.

The State House supports a plan that would pay off the $467 million in debt for the Detroit Public Schools. In addition, the Detroit Public Schools would receive only $33 million for transition costs to repair existing schools and invest in education programs. State House leaders question why the state should subsidize building repairs for one single school system.

Would you say you support the Senate plan that pays off the debt and provides $200 million in transition costs, the House plan that pays off the debt but provides $33 million in transition costs, or would you say you do not support either plan?

1.	Senate plan	30.7%	(184)

3.	Do not support either plan	39.2%	(235)
4.	Don't Know/ Refused...DO NOT OFFER	11.7%	(70)

18. As part of this debate, the Michigan Legislature is considering the creation of a Detroit Education Commission that would control how many new or charter schools could open in the City of Detroit. Supporters argue the commission is needed to control the number of schools, stabilize enrollment, and stop the loss of students in Detroit Public Schools that contributes to the school system’s debt. Opponents argue that the commission would decrease competition among schools and limit parental choice. Would you say you support or oppose controlling the growth in charter schools in Detroit?

17. The State Legislature has been considering plans to help Michigan’s largest school system, the Detroit Public Schools, deal with its debt problem. Governor Rick Snyder, Detroit Mayor Mike Duggan and the Michigan Senate support a plan that would pay off $467 million in debt for the Detroit Public Schools. In addition, the Detroit Public Schools would receive an additional $200 million in transition costs to repair existing schools and invest in improved education programs. They argue that without this additional funding, the Detroit Public Schools will simply start off in debt again as they grapple with these existing needs.

The State House supports a plan that would pay off the $467 million in debt for the Detroit Public Schools. In addition, the Detroit Public Schools would receive only $33 million for transition costs to repair existing schools and invest in education programs. State House leaders question why the state should subsidize building repairs for one single school system.

Would you say you support the Senate plan that pays off the debt and provides $200 million in transition costs, the House plan that pays off the debt but provides $33 million in transition costs, or would you say you do not support either plan?

18. As part of this debate, the Michigan Legislature is considering the creation of a Detroit Education Commission that would control how many new or charter schools could open in the City of Detroit. Supporters argue the commission is needed to control the number of schools, stabilize enrollment, and stop the loss of students in Detroit Public Schools that contributes to the school system’s debt. Opponents argue that the commission would decrease competition among schools and limit parental choice. Would you say you support or oppose controlling the growth in charter schools in Detroit? ASK: WOULD THAT BE STRONGLY SUPPORT/OPPOSE OR JUST SOMEWHAT SUPPORT/OPPOSE?
